Why we are seeking your views

We are working on a new vision for day opportunities and community services for adults with learning disabilities. We want to hear your views about this. We would like you to tell us what you would find helpful and what you think needs to change.

There is a detailed description of our vision in a document sent with this form for people who want to read it. The main changes are explained briefly here.

	We want people who use social services to have more choice and control over how they are supported to live their lives. We will do this by making sure all people have personal budgets so that they can arrange and pay for their own support. The government wants all people who use social services to have some form of personal budget by 2014.

	A personal budget is a sum of money that we give to people who are assessed as being eligible for support. They then use this money to buy the support that is right for them and their families.
	Being in control of their support will allow people with learning disabilities to participate in and contribute to community life. This could be through employment, education, community and friendships or sports and leisure activities.

We think how people use day and community services will change as people will choose to buy different types of support with their personal budget help them to be independent.

The government has to save money at the moment and has reduced the amount of money it gives to Southwark Council.

All Southwark Council departments including Health and Community Services will need to reduce their budgets as the current level of funding cannot be sustained.

We have set aside some additional money for the increasing number of children with learning disabilities surviving into adulthood and living longer lives, which means everyone who needs help will receive it.

What is our Vision?

We think that if we help people to use personal budgets they will have more choice and control when arranging their support in the community.

We also think people will get better value for money using personal budgets than the council can by arranging very big services that cost a lot but don't suit everyone.

To do this we need to change the way the day and community services work.

We will give everyone eligible for support a personal budget. The amount of money offered to each person will be based on the assessment of their eligible needs. This means everyone will be told how much money they can spend, and they can make real choices about what to spend it on to help them to be independent and safe.

Most people who use day and community services have been assessed by a social worker in the past as being eligible to receive services.

Every person currently using services will be reviewed by an experienced social worker to make sure that everyone who is eligible will continue to receive the help and support they need.

Social workers doing the reviews will ensure that people's circumstances and aspirations are fully considered. For people with profound and complex needs, people from the person's wider circle of support will be involved, including independent advocacy when needed.

Social workers will offer to help people to make their support plan. This will say what they want to achieve and how they want to live their lives, what support is needed and how it will be given, to help them live independently.

The purpose of all support will be to help people living independently, through assisting them to get an education, find paid employment, enjoy leisure and community life, and maintain friendships.

For people who are no longer eligible for support from the council we will provide them with information about other organisations where they can get advice and support.

The changes might affect family carers, depending on how people choose to spend their personal budgets or if a person's review results in them getting support in different ways. We will take the needs of carers into account.

What happens next?

We will write a report based on what you tell us.

We will give the report to the councillor who looks after health and community services and use it to help us plan how learning disability services should change.

We will announce the results of the consultation in August 2012.

We are planning for people living in residential and supported living services to start receiving personal budgets for day and community services from July 2012.

People living with family carers who don't already have a personal budget will start getting personal budgets for day and community services from Summer onwards, and those who already have personal budgets will be reviewed.

What do you think about our Vision?

We will give the report to the councillor who looks after health and community services and use it to help us plan how learning disability services should change.

We will announce the results of the consultation in August 2012.

We are planning for people living in residential and supported living services to start receiving personal budgets for day and community services from July 2012.

People living with family carers who don't already have a personal budget will start getting personal budgets for day and community services from Summer onwards, and those who already have personal budgets will be reviewed.
