Therefore the ESEA was involved in deciding the need for this project. In Southwark, in particular the North East area ward we have one of the largest East Asian communities in London. This project seeks to celebrate the rich diversities of this community and its related communities through the medium of music. it also seeks to bring people together through a enjoyable family friendly music event. Though there are music ventures in the community, mostly jazz base, what makes this project unique is that it will be pioneering as it has never been done before in the borough or anywhere else. As a result, Southwark will be in the forefront of this new heritage movement. The music performance will composed of artists from Mongolia, China, Philippines, Thailand, South Korea and Japan. This type of event is needed because music unites people, its intimate, it connects people with their community. It also helps when we celebrate our differences, and are open to our diversity, we allow our preconceived notions to be proven wrong. The event will build cultural awareness, as it will help people to learn about other cultures and people. Furthermore, when we remove prejudices and stereotypes through education and celebration using music, we may discourage the ignorance that supports racism but encourage unity instead.	£5,291.00

			and leisure centres, estate ball courts, parks and Guys Hospital. The programme helps bring older people from different backgrounds together through taking part in fun walking sports activities which also helps reduce stress, isolation and loneliness. The activities help support older people who are currently inactive and supports those with two or three limiting long-term health conditions, including dementia, mental health, and limited mobility to stay fit and healthy. 30 minutes before each activity, refreshments are provided along with local newspapers to encourage individual and open table conversations. The structured sports activities include the use of throwing, catching, rolling and striking the ball techniques which provide participants to have fun, stimulate the mind, develop balance and hand-eye coordination. The weekly sessions help take away the stress for those living with someone who has dementia for the time they are at the programme which is often all they might normally get. Weekly telephone conversations also help regular communication going which reduces people feeling lonely away from the sessions.
1090	Samantha Kissin	Bye George	This is an interactive, pop-up art and audio installation which explores the importance of local community and honouring everyday friendships. It is a fresh take on the "commemorative bench" and will see three canvas fisherman's chairs, decorated by local artists, placed on the spot where George, a local fisherman and a friend used to fish daily - there will be a QR code which will link to a recorded piece of spoken word poetry which I wrote for him just after he died and which can be played on people's smart phones through headphones. People will be encouraged to listen to the piece and/or sit in the re-imagined fishing chairs at the spot he occupied. They will then be invited to remember the significant local friendships and links in their lives and if they want to contribute these to a book which will later be put online. I think it is important to be reminded to celebrate local community bonds and the particular importance that elder members of our community play, especially in giving history and context to a place. This project will highlight the role that the older generation can play at the beating heart of our landscapes here in this historical part of London and how enriching inter-generational friendships can be.	£3,149.93

			young people have the opportunity to become active members of society, improve their lives, prepare for their futures and fulfil their potential. Young people regularly give feedback to ensure were meeting their needs. Our Youth Consultation highlighted the most important thing in lockdown was time spent at the Farm, it was the only outdoor space many accessed and they told us it was vital for maintaining good mental health. Our participants report that the Farm has improved their social skills, physical and mental wellbeing, increased confidence and many are now successfully pursuing further education and careers in horticulture, agriculture, ecology and environmental sciences as a result of working with us. Our young people are supported to engage with their community and care for spaces beyond the Farm. They are all really interested to do this and have grown plants to donate to community spaces, regularly litter pick the foreshore and have delivered several social action projects to welcome more people to the Farm, further details here: www.surreydocksfarm.org.uk/youth-led-social-action/ We're requesting funding to give these young people the freedom to choose their own project to work on together to benefit their community
